

Turn the Clean Energy Finance Corporation into an emergency national investment bank

With just a few changes to the Clean Energy Finance Corporation Act 2012, which could and should be legislated, the Australian government could repurpose the Clean Energy Finance Corporation (CEFC) into an emergency national investment bank.

It could lend to federal, state and local government agencies for public energy, water, power, transportation and communications infrastructure projects that could start immediately, and to private entrepreneurs who need finance for their ideas to revive industries and develop new industries, which for too long have been shelved because the private banks won't lend to them, but now could become the engine of an economic recovery. The future of our country depends on making this happen!

We need your help. Forward this PDF document of the flyer to your local federal and state MPs, federal Senators, local councillors and any other local leaders you can think of, and call on them to support this emergency plan to establish a national investment bank to revive the economy.

Click image to download PDF

Federal and state parliamentarian contact details

Federal Government

House of Representatives

Senate

State Governments

VIC - Legislative Council and House of Assembly combined

ACT - House of Assembly

QLD - Members of State Parliament

NSW - Legislative Council and House of Assembly combined

SA Legislative Council - SA House of Assembly

TAS Legislative Council - TAS House of Assembly

WA Legislative Council - WA House of Assembly