LaRouche: Bankruptcy for the system, not the people

In his June 27th webcast, American economist and statesman, Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr, reiterated the necessity for an immediate bankruptcy reorganisation, in order to rescue the rapidly collapsing world economy.

“The United States’ government must state the policy, that the world as a whole is hopelessly bankrupt, financially; that the present financial-monetary system of the world is hopelessly bankrupt. We are not going to let the people go into bankruptcy. We’re going to put the systems that are at fault, in bankruptcy reorganisation. We’re going to take the parts of the banks, where people’s savings and things like that are located; we’re going to keep those banks operating, their doors are going to be open, under government bankruptcy protection. The filth, the wastepaper, which we’ve been bailing out—no, it goes!

“We take Wall Street’s interests, and similar scoundrels’ interests, these large amounts of money, we say, ‘Sorry, buddy! Bankruptcy reorganisation—and your assets just got chopped!’”

LaRouche made clear that the collective decision of nations, since we entered the global economic-breakdown in July 2007, to put the banks, and their bail-out, ahead of the people has brought us to the brink of disaster.

He gave the example of California (the world’s sixth largest economy)—where budget cuts are exacerbating the bankruptcy. The state will run out of money in July, and will be forced to issue IOUs to pay vendors, state contractors, and low-income, disabled and old-age pensions. More than two weeks ago, California’s state comptroller John Chiang estimated that the state was “less than 50 days away from a meltdown of state government.”

Community health clinics, disability and in home support services, child welfare, and foster care, are amongst the critical services on the chopping block. Revenue collections from personal income taxes for the first five months of 2009 were already down by 34%, and further cuts (or IOUs) will cause the coffers to dwindle further.

In contrast, LaRouche’s proposal for a bankruptcy reorganisation would clear the decks, to allow the creation of a Hamiltonian-style credit system—“We use that to reorganise the world: by going to other countries, such as Russia, China, India, and other countries, and we ask them to join us, in creating an international credit system, based on the sovereignty of nation states.

“We create the credit program. What do we do? We create productive power. The power to live, the power to increase our productivity. We rebuild our country: We put back the railroad system, in a new form! We rebuild our industries... the agricultural system”, as well as healthcare.

“If we do that over the long term, 30 to 50 years, we can rebuild this planet. If we are not willing to do that, however, and precisely that, the decision not to do that, is a decision to commit national suicide. And it’s coming on fast.”

GetUp targets Australian youth for Soros Orange Revolution

Well-connected political front group GetUp is attempting to lure youth as young as 14 to Sydney next month, for a staged protest on climate change, to further GetUp's "Orange Revolution" operation in Australia.

A leader of the LaRouche Youth Movement in Australia, Doug Mitchell, blasted GetUp's agenda, and warned Australian youth against falling for GetUp's ruse:

"GetUp is a political front for the City of London's attack on national sovereignty, being run through multibillionaire currency speculator George Soros," Mitchell said. "Soros and his British controller, Lord Malloch-Brown, use outfits like GetUp, its U.S. counterpart MoveOn.org, and the various 'colour' revolutions like the Orange Revolution in Ukraine, and the Rose Revolution in Georgia, to force more and more globalisation on the nations they target.

"It is clear from GetUp's activities they plan an Orange Revolution for Australia, under the smokescreen of the lie of human-induced climate change."

The two co-founders of GetUp, Harvard graduates Jeremy Heimans and David Madden, both worked for the Soros-funded MoveOn.org in the U.S. to also launch the global web "movement", Avaaz.org. Madden was previously a consultant to the World Bank and Heimans previously consulted for the UN, OECD and ILO.

This self-styled "grass-roots" movement, which appeared suddenly in 2005, boasted among its founding board members: John Hewson, former federal opposition leader, former Macquarie Bank Executive Director and Trilateral Commission member; Don Mercer, a mining chief, former ANZ CEO and a past Director of the Australian Institute of Company Directors; and Evan Thornley, the super-rich Labor Party money-bags who is also National Secretary of the Australian Fabian Society.

GetUp is busy recruiting youth aged 14-30 to register for their planned climate protest called Power Shift 2009. In all likelihood GetUp will dress the youth in orange clothes and give them orange placards to wave, so it is instructive to look at what eventuated in Soros's previous Orange Revolution, in Ukraine in 2004-05. In a geopolitical move to destabilise Russia, electoral fraud was alleged in the 2004 Ukrainian Presidential election and orange-clad protestors were duped into backing the Central Banker candidate, Viktor Yushchenko over his rival Viktor Yanukovich. Four years later Ukrainians bitterly regret falling for the Soros-funded hype around Yushchenko's "way to a better life" under the WTO and Maastricht free trade looting of the European Union, and now President Yushchenko's approval rating is at a miserable 6 per cent.

Doug Mitchell concluded, "Australian youth are being targeted by GetUp because we have the passion to act on problems we see need to be solved. Instead of falling for this scam, young people should find out the truth about the climate change fraud for themselves, and join the CEC and LYM fight to stop it."
