Memo to Tony Abbott:

Bob Brown's not the Queen behind Gillard's carbon tax

Tony Abbott is seemingly torn between his tender devotion to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, and his instinctive fear of the political rage of the Australian people, who are rising up against the carbon tax they recognise will destroy them, a tax which has been dictated by ... his own Queen.

One month before the 2009 Copenhagen climate change fiasco the Queen revealed herself to be not the powerless figurehead she usually pretends to be, when in her keynote address she ordered the Commonwealth nations assembled at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting (CHOGM) in Trinidad and Tobago to take the lead in adopting suicidal "solutions" to a (non-existent) climate change crisis:

"The Commonwealth can be proud of the fact that in each of its six decades, it has shaped the international response to emerging global challenges", she intoned. "And on this, the eve of the UN Copenhagen Summit on Climate Change, the Commonwealth has an opportunity to lead once more. The threat to our environment is not a new concern. But it is now a global challenge which will continue to affect the security and stability of millions for years to come. ... In a world where political, economic and environmental problems and opportunities cross continents, the Commonwealth will also need to prove its relevance beyond its own borders and develop a truly global perspective."

Of course, as the CEC has long exposed, the supposed "threat" of climate change she was marshalling her Empire to charge against is a scientific fraud cooked up by British eugenicists under the sponsorship of her own husband:

- Prince Philip joined with the Netherlands' Prince Bernhard—a former member of Hitler's SS—and British Eugenics Society President Sir Julian Huxley in 1961 to found the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), to raise funds for Huxley's International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN); Huxley stated that the goal of the new IUCN/WWF-led movement of "environmentalism" was to implement the racist goals of eugenics, but "by other language", given that Hitler had given eugenics a bad name. The purpose of "environmentalism", like eugenics, is to reduce the world's population, to "cull the human herd", as Prince Philip has repeatedly demanded, a view shared by his minions in the entire Australian green movement he personally fostered—the Australian Conservation Foundation, WWF Australia, Sustainable Population Australia, and the Wentworth Group, among others. It is no accident, for instance, that the Greens are now leading the charge for euthanasia in Australia, to just plain murder the old and the ill.

- Huxley's cousin, Sir Crispin Tickell, a sometime featured speaker to the British

Eugenics Society, who once proclaimed that "Mankind is a disease", personally launched the present crusade against so-called "global warming" in the late 1970s, boasting that as British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's principal science adviser, he had "persuaded her of the importance of climate change". Among his other activities, Tickell wrote Thatcher's speeches on climate change, including her 1988 speech to the UN as the first national leader to demand global action; he directed Thatcher to pour funds for the study of global warming into the British Meteorological Office led by John Houghton, which along with the discredited Climatic Research Unit at East Anglia University is the source of most of the harum-scarum, idiotic computer-modelled climate change scenarios; and as British Ambassador to the UN from 1987-1990, he organised the establishment of the presently dictatorial Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) in 1988, with Houghton chairing its scientific assessment office. Britain's current high priest of climate change, Sir Nicholas Stern, is Tickell's protégé. (See Aug/Sept 2009 "Carbon trading is Hitler-style Genocide", for more.)

But the incredible proposition that the Australian government would impose a British policy to deliberately destroy the nation has a clear precedent—the Hawke-Keating-Howard-Abbott tariff cuts of the early 1990s, directed, not coincidentally, by the same man now directing Gillard's carbon tax, economic hit man Professor Ross Garnaut, although Howard and Abbott deserve credit along with Hawke and Keating because those reforms were emphatically supported by the Opposition.

Gillard herself made the comparison in Parliament on 24th February, saying, "Let us look at what happened with that tariff reform. There were all sorts of fear campaigns at the time about job losses and the end of Australian industry, but as a result of that kind of reform we are prosperous and stronger today." In fact, Australian manufacturing between 1985 and 2005 collapsed from close to 20 per cent to a mere 10 per cent of the economy, and the flood of imports drove up net foreign debt in that time from $75 billion to $465 billion.

Such destruction is no mere incompetence, but is deliberate, as de facto admitted by Trade Minister Craig Emerson in a speech to the Lowy Institute on 10th December, 2010, in which he announced a renewed push for free trade—a push led by Great Britain, as British Foreign Secretary William Hague confirmed in his own speech to the Lowy Institute a month later.

Free trade is a British imperial policy to deny nations their economic sovereignty, to maintain them as colonial possessions to be looted by the financial oligarchy of the City of London, exactly as the Hawke-

Keating free trade "reforms" reduced Australia from a high-technology manufacturing powerhouse to a raw materials quarry, plundered by the City of London's raw materials cartel, BHP Billiton and the Queen's own Rio Tinto.

Now, they are destroying our agricultural production as well, through "environmentalism", by demanding that nations submit to draconian "solutions" to such alleged—but non-existent—"threats to the environment" such as climate change, disappearing wetlands, etc.

Tony Abbott, the loyal Royalist, was an ardent supporter of the British free trade annihilation of Australian industry; is he a genuine opponent of the Queen's carbon tax, or is he being opportunistic, because he's terrified of the electoral consequences if he doesn't oppose it? If it's the latter, well enough—join the fight which the CEC and the LaRouche movement has led internationally on this issue.

More generally, a mass strike has now broken out worldwide stretching from Ireland to Egypt to the United States among populations which have been systematically looted for decades by the City of London-centred British monetarist empire, but who have now had enough and are bringing down evil, corrupt régimes across the globe. That's a start. But if you want to know how to solve this problem, to actually rebuild our nation from the decades of British free trade and environmentalism which have brought us to the brink of total disaster, then you must view CEC National Secretary Craig Isherwood's emergency Address to the Nation on 15th January, 2011, and Lyndon LaRouche's international webcast, State of the Union, on 22nd January, 2011. At the moment, Gillard, Abbott and virtually the entire presently reigning political class of British stooges in this country have no more intention to actually save this country from its man-made as well as its natural disasters, than Mubarak had for Egypt, nor Qaddafi for Libya.

The Queen's carbon tax is designed to kill

"Forget about the carbon tax hurting your wallet—it's going to kill you," Citizens Electoral Council leader Craig Isherwood declared today.

Mr Isherwood scorned economic modelling that showed the carbon tax would cost families $800 per year, or $16 per week.

"The issue is not so much that it will cost money," he said, "the issue is that it will kill the economy, by crippling baseload electricity generation, agriculture and manufacturing, without which people cannot live. It will give us a Third World economy and the corresponding Third World life expectancy.

"Already now, pensioners are suffering hyperthermia and heat stroke and thousands have died because they can not afford to heat or cool their homes. These numbers will only skyrocket with such proposed energy cuts.

"It's designed to kill people," he insisted. "The Queen herself ordered the members of the Commonwealth at CHOGM in 2009 to lead the world on climate change action, such as pricing carbon, to achieve the British Crown's strategic policy, oft-stated by her husband, of global population reduction.

"Or as Julia Gillard's fellow Fabian Society member and sustainable population fanatic Kelvin Thomson put it in the newspeak of climate change, we can't reduce our carbon footprint with reducing the number of footprints."

Mandating 20 per cent "renewable" energy by 2020, while banning nuclear power, will drive Australia into a dark age, Mr Isherwood said.

"Renewable energy is a fraud—solar panels and windmills can't generate enough energy to make solar panels and windmills," he scoffed.

"Consumers may get compensation for the carbon tax they pay, but they won't get reliable electricity.”

He explained, “A living standard is not based on money, it is based on the availability of energy, food, health care, education, infrastructure and essential services.

“Australia’s ability to guarantee those things has already been mostly destroyed by more than 20 years of another British Crown policy—the free market, pushed by right-wing think tanks associated with the Crown-funded Mont Pelerin Society; what hasn’t been destroyed, now the carbon tax will finish off.”

Mr Isherwood called on Australians to get behind the CEC’s fight to throw out the genocidal policies of the British Crown, and revitalise the Australian economy for the benefit of the people.

“Australia must go back to being a high-technology economy, with a commitment to real science and industry,” he said.

“We must take advantage of our abundant natural resources of uranium and thorium, and go nuclear; we should launch a space program; we need a high-speed magnetically-levitated train network connecting all of our major cities; we need great water projects, that can transform the arid interior of Australia the way irrigation transformed the Murray-Darling basin, into new food bowls to feed the world.

“Join the CEC’s fight to achieve this vision for Australia,” he urged.

Isherwood on government funding of greens: “Cut it out!”

Responding to revelations that the main green groups in Australia which front Prince Philip’s genocidal depopulation agenda and which are the chief proponents for a “carbon tax”, have received an astounding $10 million in federal and state government funding over the past five years, Citizens Electoral Council leader Craig Isherwood demanded, “I want my money back!”

Some of the relevant essentials were reported in the 19th-20th March The Weekend Australian: Prince Philip’s own Australian Conservation Foundation, which he founded in 1963 and nurtured for many years as its president, has pocketed $2.9m over the past five years, while other recipients include Environment Victoria (over $4 million), Total Environment Centre ($450,000), the Wilderness Society ($125,000), and the eco-fascist Friends of the Earth ($65,000). Curiously, The Weekend Australian neglected to mention that the Australian branch of Prince Philip’s World Wide Fund for Nature also receives millions of dollars of government funding every year.

The Weekend Australian’s belated revelations are only the tip of the iceberg, because Federal and State governments have lavishly financed these genocidal green groups for decades. For instance, the ACF is supposedly a “private” foundation, but it only got off the ground in the 1960s because the Federal Government poured in hundreds of thousands of dollars (i.e. millions in today’s equivalent) to get them going, while in the late 1980s Graham Richardson as Environment Minister in the Hawke government funnelled public money to the same green groups. In fact, without that financial and other Federal support, the Australian Greens likely would never have emerged in the first place, while the 19th March revelations by this Rupert Murdoch rag have much the smell of a whore screaming “Rape!”, given that his paper has honoured Greens honcho Bob Brown as “Australian of the Year”. Mr Isherwood accused the federal and state governments of financing genocide:

“Prince Philip and his Nazi eugenicist cronies launched the green movement to achieve one goal—eliminating most of the world’s human population”, he charged.

“He openly fantasises about being reincarnated as a deadly virus to create a pandemic to mass-murder people; he compares human beings to herds of sheep, who need to be ‘culled’ so they don’t exceed their carrying capacity; his ACF wants human population growth to be legally classified as a ‘key threatening process’ to native biodiversity, the same category as cane toads and feral cats; his ACF spawned Sustainable Population Australia, which openly wants to reduce the number of Australians, through a Chinese-style ‘one child’ policy and racist immigration restrictions that stop people from developing countries immigrating to Australia; and his ideological love-child, Professor Tim Flannery, who is a trustee of his World Wide Fund for Nature and a Patron of Sustainable Population Australia, has demanded that Australia’s population be slashed to as few as six million people.

“These are the very groups and individuals which have relentlessly campaigned to shut down our national food bowl, the Murray-Darling Basin, and to destroy our food security.”

Mr Isherwood continued, “Only an idiot could not see the obvious: that Prince Philip’s green movement is not a ‘grass-roots movement of the people’, but a fascist force deployed by an oligarchical elite, wielding political power far greater than its actual support among the population because it is government-funded to begin with—as global warming advocate Murdoch now belatedly reveals in an attempt to corral the growing mass strike against British imperial genocide.

“Where are the regulations for this kind of funding?” he demanded. “What should apply here is truth-in-labelling laws, so the ACF are forced to declare that their policies will kill people. It’s mandatory for cigarettes, so why not the ACF? After all, their policies will assuredly kill millions.” He concluded, “Governments that conspire against their own populations should be held to the Nuremberg standard of crimes against humanity. If the various state and federal governments don’t like to hear that, they should stop funding these genocidalists.”

LaRouche:

Mankind must confront extinction threat

The spate of deadly earthquakes around the Pacific Rim of Fire, including last week's Myanmar (Burma) triple earthquake, is a harbinger of what the world faces in the immediate period ahead, which must be recognised as an extinction threat that the nations of the world must mobilise their scientists, engineers and economies to confront.

U.S. statesman and physical economist Lyndon LaRouche is leading the world to address this reality, by marshalling a "crash-program" scientific investigation that will increase mankind's understanding of the cyclical solar and galactic forces that drive these periods of extinction danger.

What is already known, is that there is a correlation between solar flares, which bombard earth with enormous bursts of energy many orders of magnitude greater than any force on earth, and tectonic activity. The earth is in a heightened danger period in the sunspot (solar flare) cycle, having emerged from an extended period of no sunspots into a period of rapidly increasing sunspots as the cycle builds to its maximum in 2013. British astrophysicist Piers Corbyn attributes the Japan earthquake to the X-class solar flare of 10th March, 2011, that significantly impacted the earth, and was reported by NASA.

On a far greater time scale, the geological record displays a correlation between a 62 million year cycle of tectonic/volcanic activity, and a 62 million year extinction cycle, both of which correlate to the 62 million year cycle of our solar system's oscillation, or "bob", above and below the plane of the Milky Way galaxy, indicating that galactic forces drive the major catastrophic events recorded in earth's geological record. The last great extinction, that of the dinosaurs, was 65 million years ago.

LaRouche warns that few places on earth are as well-prepared for earthquakes and tsunamis as Japan. So in the likely event that earthquakes of unprecedented magnitude triggered by solar and galactic forces hit other populated areas typified by California, which sits aside the ominous San Andreas Fault and is clearly also on the dangerous Rim of Fire and is overdue for a major quake but has made virtually no preparation, mankind will experience an unprecedented threat to its survival.

LaRouche said on 23rd March, "Here we have this wonderful universe, this wonderful galaxy, with all the dangers involved in it, but we have the human potential for understanding it. And by using that potential, we have a fighting chance that the human species will continue to exist. If we don't, I don't think the human species can continue to exist, and we're now at a point where the very awesome forces, the galactic forces which are behind what happened, with this little minuscule taste of what's coming, in the Pacific, that with that hitting us, and we are not equipped by any means, to cope with those forces! We can adjust to them—but cope with them? No! And we have to change the tune, from that of adjusting to something we can no longer live with, as a species, and trying to get to the point, where we exert control over this process, which is our proper destiny."

LaRouche emphasised that the biggest threat to mankind's survival is the British Crown's Green Fascism which has halted all scientific and technological development for the past several decades, including the development of the power sources (fission and fusion power, matter-antimatter reactions, etc.) necessary to enable us to deal with these threats.
